

Peer Review Sheet

for Rhetorical Analysis

Owner of Paper: _____

Reviewer: _____

1. Is it at least 400 words so far?
2. Does the paper use just 1 academic source? How do you know?
3. Is the summary no more than 250 words? Where could the writer's summary of the text be expanded, condensed, or clarified? Is the summary objective? Do all sentences have attributive tags? If not, which ones?
4. Does the author give a thesis to start the analysis? Identify it. How could the thesis statement be made more focused, risky, and clear in setting up the writer's analytical points?
5. Does the author make both with and against the grain comments? Explain. Does the analysis focus on the situation, purpose, audience, and claims? Explain. What further textual evidence could the writer add to develop these analytical points and make them more interesting or comprehensive?
6. How well does the writer support their claims with evidence (quotes) from the original text? How well do they follow APA style guidelines for citing and citations?
